

SATURDAY, JANUARY 18, 1834.

Yesterday we received four letters from our Washington correspondent, all bearing different dates upon the inside, but all postmarked the "14th." We do not mention this circumstance with the desire of producing any collision between Turkey and the United States, although it may attract the notice of the Reis Effendi.

Three of these letters are upon our first page—they will be found interesting; the first one gives the conclusion of the description of Mr Secretary Woodbury's party on the 8th.

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS.
No. XXXVII.

Washington, Jan. 13, 1834.—At last I have heard Mr Calhoun; not on the Read of the Force Bill, but the restoration of the Deposites. Shall I confess it? I was disappointed—sadly disappointed. The serpent must have been more subtle and more eloquent to have tempted our first parents; the learned and talented Senator will hardly persuade their descendants to partake of his forbidden fruit.

He forged out, with all the fiery ardor of the Cyclops, a few links of metaphysics; but he could not connect them in the chain of demonstration; it was the very Mormonism of political faith; the political atheism of every established creed; and went to the denial of all supremacy; the annihilation of all governments. And yet he spoke as if from inspiration. He made no "notes of preparation;" and never once referred to a single scrap, though he spoke nearly or quite an hour and a half, without a pause, without the slightest hesitation, and with no other effort but that of restraining his feelings. Though he disappointed me, he astonished me, but did not convince me—except it was to differ with him toto calo in all his positions.

He alluded in commencing, by saying that he was wholly unconnected with either political party, now contending against each other; he belonged to a small denominated and dishonored party. Taking the case of the Deposites as the Secretary had stated it, he denied that he had made it out, not justified himself. He assumes to be the head of the Treasury; the power belongs to the Treasurer—he gives the bonds, &c. [But I would ask Mr Calhoun, what security is the bond of $150,000, given by the Treasurer, for ten or twelve millions of the revenue? Surely the Treasurer's bond is no security at all for so many millions.]

He said the Secretary had mistaken his case: he had exceeded his assumed power; that assumed power should never exceed the necessity which called for it; said Secretary was a trustee for the Bank and the Government, for the safety of the public funds; said the Deposites were more safe in the U. S. Bank; spoke of the government officers as being "faint and madmen;" warring against the rights of the South; said the charter was a contract between the Government and the Bank; that the Deposites were of vast importance to the Bank; that the Bank was of great importance to the Government; and the Treasurer was a mere trustee; and as long as the Bank fulfilled its contract to the Government, it was a violation of the compact; said Bank had fulfilled all contracts. But he did not tell us how it had fulfilled the contract of paying off the 3 per cents, when the United States had twelve millions or more in the treasury, alias Bank. He said the question of renewing the charter, was no issue made to the people; nobody had any right to make it. [But the Bank joined it; and spent $100,000 in trying the case before a jury of twelve millions of people; and they agreed on the verdict; and no power on earth can set it aside.] He said to infer public opinion from such an act, (as placing the issue of an election on the renewal of a charter,) was to overthrow the government! Said there were only two ways in which the Executive had a right to utter his sentiments, by Messages, and Proclamations; spoke of spies of the Government; gave us a scheme for stock-jobbing; said the Secretary of the Treasury, and not the Bank, was under examination; that he had no right to look into the conduct of the Bank, for reasons for removing the Deposites; said Bank was under obligations to him; but he had no connexion with it; that State Banks were unsafe; that there was a material difference between removing, and withholding deposits; that Bank and Treasury were the same thing; that precedents were of no authority where there were laws and a constitution; if this case (the removal, &c.) had been clear, the Secretary ought to have been ashamed of giving such reasons; if it were doubtful, he ought to have been afraid to have acted. He alluded to the President, and his veto power, rather unceremoniously; said it should have been a shield but he had converted it to a sword; that its exercise was a great encroachment of power; that the removal of the Deposites had depreciated the stock, a loss to the Government and stockholders; said "credit" was a circulating medium; and it would be distracted for years, unless the Deposites were restored; he threatened to wage war upon the State Banks, till they were restored; that these banks were confederates, calculated to destroy State Rights. He spoke of the "bloody Force Bill"—bayonets; said this was not a question about the Bank (which was a great agent in the distribution of power)—it was not Bank or no Bank? but a great struggle between the Executive and Legislative power of the Country; that the banks can control the country; spoke of the "foul administration"—of the menace and temptation of the banks, and their schemes of stock-jobbing; said he should move the restoration of the deposits; spoke of Mr Clay's, "We are in the midst of a revolution," as a "great truth of profound philosophy." [Oke jaun satis!] but he disagreed with him on some other points; spoke of Caesar and Metellus—of false keys to the treasury; said the "true place of the Deposites was in the pockets of the honest laborer;" then there would be a distribution of surplus, &c. He concluded with supplicating Divine Providence to avert our ruin, &c.

Mr Shepley has the floor to-morrow. Mr Preston made a few maiden remarks on Mr Clay's Minimum Resolution, which left a very favorable impression upon the audience, both as to his oratory and his abilities.

REIS EFFENDI.

Mr Shepley's Speech, commenced on Tuesday, in the Senate, upon the Deposit question, is spoken of in letters received yesterday, as very forcible. He is a gentleman of great abilities, and will no doubt handle the subject in a manner worthy of his high reputation in New England. His speech is looked for with much interest.

The cargo of a new steamer, belonging to Nashville, Tennessee, bound to New Orleans, was 3,500 bales of cotton, valued at 175,000 dollars.

The opposition papers teem with so many inaccurate statements of what they call facts, and with so many errors of opinion, that it would be a hopeless work to attempt a correction of any considerable portion of them—we will, however, briefly allude to one to-day—in this great controversy we wish to reach the truth, to arrive at first conclusions—to see the public interests guarded against the encroachments of a great monied power, that approaches, under the disguise of a public benefactor. With these prefatory remarks, we make the following extract from a communication in the Courier of Thursday:—

"A common rate of interest is at least as high as twelve per cent. per annum. Some of the first commercial houses in this and in neighboring cities have paid this rate. Even more, many a man in good credit, with good means, has had day after day, and week after week, to pay as high as one and a quarter, and even one and a half per cent. per month for money—three times the amount of what has been shown by long experience to be a high rate of interest in this country!"

From this paragraph, the casual reader would be led to believe that, the general rate of interest had risen to some 12 or 18 per cent. per annum. But if any one will look calmly and carefully into facts, he will soon be convinced that the supposition is not true. It would be impracticable to ascertain the amount of debts due in this city, in all their immensity and complicated forms, and difficult even to estimate, with accuracy, the sum. But if we consider the almost universal system of credit on which the business of the community is conducted, and the trading propensities of our citizens, it will not be, we think, unreasonable to suppose that the debts reach to twice the amount of all the property—we do not mean by this, that the people are bankrupt—but that the balances due from one to another, which in a final settlement, of course, would cancel each other, amounts to the same. The wealth of this city may be estimated at 100 millions of dollars—and the debts at 200 millions. There are upwards of 30 millions of Bank debts alone—of this 200 millions, we do not believe more than two per cent., or four millions of dollars, bears a higher rate of interest than six per cent.—although individuals, who are extended in their promises to pay, feel this pressure, yet compared to the grand whole, the embarrassment is not of sufficient moment to affect the action of the public on the great question of perpetuating a monied government.

In the country, the proportion of contracts bearing a usurious interest, is still less than in the city—we appeal to the country gentlemen themselves for the correctness of this opinion. We may allude to this matter again.

The Last Chance.—Mr McDonald Clarke will Lecture for the last time, at the Masonic Temple, this evening. His subjects, "Love and Marriage," come home to the bosoms of all; he has heretofore been listened to by ladies and lasses with heartfelt satisfaction, many of whom have united in giving a practical illustration of their appreciation of his good advice. This being his last Lecture, we feel confident that it will be listened to by more than an ordinary exercise of his rich fancy and agreeable wit, and redound as much to his honor as it will contribute to the gratification and instruction of those who hear him. We shall open our ear to his Lecture, let the weather be fair or foul.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Mr Smith's Benefit.—Mr Greene—I observe that next Wednesday is assigned for the benefit of W. H. Smith, of the Tremont Theatre. This gentleman has long been with us, and by his gentlemanly deportment, amiable manners, and strictly honorable course, has secured the respect and esteem of his associates in private life. Although in the character of its performers, as a class, we may consider the Tremont as holding a high rank, yet it can be justly asserted that in the correctness of principle and conduct, Mr Smith stands among the first. As a performer, he has long been a favorite with the public. Perfect in the commitment and critically correct in the delivery of his part, applying action to the word, without "overstepping the modesty of nature," exhibiting the intention of the author in the representation of his characters, Mr Smith can be truly said always to satisfy, and often to surprise even his admirers.

As Mr Smith presents himself soon after the departure of eminent vocalists who have drawn full houses, he labors under the disadvantage of the season of indifference which usually succeeds an unusual excitement; therefore the success of his benefit will depend upon those who are either individually friendly to him, or who appreciate his talents as an actor. To all of either class we suggest the propriety on this occasion of proving they have not forgotten a meritorious actor. A.

The Virginia Legislature has not acted as yet upon the resolutions which promised so much gratification to the friends of the Bank, and it seems quite probable that they never will. The Enquirer gives the following report of the proceeding on Wednesday last.

Bank Deposites.—Mr Dorman said, he had been requested by the Chairman of the Select Committee, on the subject of the Bank Deposites, to move that the report of that Committee, with the substitute offered by the gentleman from Hanover, be re-committed.

Mr Wilson, of Bot., hoped the report and substitute would not be taken up, as when it should be, he should move their indefinite postponement.

The Charleston Post, of the 4th inst. announces the demise of Colonel William Cotesworth Pickney, of Waterborough, S. C. Col. P. was one of the Republicans of '98, and for several years speaker of the House of Representatives, in the Legislature of South Carolina.

Forbes, the murderer of Col. Brailsford, was hanged at Darien, Geo. on the 27th. A few minutes before the execution he attempted to cut his throat, and appeared on the scaffold covered with blood. He refused to suffer a cap over his face, and used the most profane language to those around. He was swung off with a half uttered curse upon his lips.

Eastern Lands.—The value of these lands is constantly rising in general estimation among those who know how to appreciate their worth. A few years ago the State sold in one year about 260,000 acres of land for $40,000. In 1832 it sold 365,000 for $181,000.—Newburyport Herald.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate yesterday, a bill was reported on petition of J. Wilson and others—also of Globe Fire and Marine Ins. Co; and to increase stock of B. and L. Railroad Co, passed to be engrossed, and sent down.

Committee on amendment of third article, reported votes in favor 32,334—against 3,372. In the House, the petition of the Marshpee Indians, for a redress of grievances, a removal of the overseers, and an entire alteration of the laws with respect to their government, except the restriction that they may not sell their lands, was laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

A resolution, allowing the Clerk of the House $10 per day, and the Speaker $4 per day, during the session, and also to allow the Clerk $100 for copying the Journal, was read once and ordered to a second reading.

The bill authorizing the Court of Common Pleas, on application of both parties, to decide civil cases where the amount claimed does not exceed $50, without the intervention of a jury, was negatived.

CONGRESS.

Tuesday, Jan. 14.—In the Senate, Mr Morris presented the resolutions of the Legislature of Ohio, approving of the removal of the deposits—instructing their Senators and requesting their Representatives to oppose the re-chartering of the Bank—and approving of the President's Veto upon Mr Clay's Land bill.

Mr Clay's resolution for affording relief from the pressure in the Money Market was taken up, debated by Messrs Clay, Brown, Forsyth, Shepley and others, and finally laid on the table for the present.

Mr Shepley addressed the Senate at length, against Mr Clay's resolutions upon the removal of the deposits, but at 3 o'clock gave way to a motion to adjourn, which was subsequently withdrawn to allow the introduction by Mr Webster, of resolutions requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to lay before the Senate a copy of the official order or direction for changing the place of the deposit of the public money—a copy of the official bond of the Treasurer of the United States—and copies of all drafts, checks, or orders, issued in order to transfer the public moneys from the Bank of the United States to the State Banks, selected as Banks of deposit.

Adjourned. In the House, Mr Adams (of Mass.) submitted a resolution, which was adopted, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to lay before the House copies of such instructions as have been given to the Collectors of the Customs since the 26th of December last.

Mr Gilmer submitted a resolution—which lies on the table one day—directing the Secretary of War to lay before the House all correspondence which he may have had, or other information in his possession, in relation to the death of Hardiman Owens, a citizen of Alabama, who was lately put to death by a party of regular soldiers.

On motion of Mr Ward, the committee on Naval Affairs were instructed to inquire into the expediency of constructing a dry dock at or near the city of New York, and of ordering surveys to be made to determine its location.

Mr Mardis submitted a resolution, the consideration of which was postponed until Monday next, that the Committee of Ways and Means be instructed to inquire into the expediency of designating, by law, the future depository of the public moneys of the United States, and also as to the expediency of defining by law all contracts hereafter to be made with the Secretary of the Treasury in relation to the safe keeping, management, and disbursement of the same.

The House having resumed the consideration of the motion to refer the Secretary of the Treasury's Report on the Deposites to the Committee of Ways and Means; and the question being upon Mr McDuffie's motion to add instructions to the Committee to report a joint resolution, providing that the public revenue hereafter collected shall be deposited in the Bank of the United States, in compliance with the public faith, pledged by the charter of the said Bank, Mr Cambreleng addressed the House in a speech of much point levelled against all classes of bank monopolies. When he had concluded, Seaborn Jones moved to strike out Mr McDuffie's amendment, and insert instructions requiring the Committee to inquire into the expediency of depositing the Revenue hereafter collected in the State Banks in the different States, where the same is collected, in proportion to their respective capitals paid in, and to prescribe the terms on which the same shall be deposited, and to report by bill or otherwise.

The engrossed bill making appropriations for the Naval service for 1834, was read a third time and passed. Adjourned.

The bill of mortality of this city for the past year, shows that from the 1st of January, 1833, to the 1st of January, 1834, the number of interments was 5746—an average of 110 a week. The number of deaths which occurred in this city in 1832, (the cholera year) was 10,359, almost double the number of last year. In 1831, the deaths were 6363, upwards of 600 more than in 1833.—N. Y. Post.

Apoplexy is the only explanation we have heard from the physicians called in.—Id.

POLICE COURT.

Charles G. Martin just called into a cellar, on Thursday night, where a small party were amusing themselves with a game of all fours, and played the knaze, by unhooking a blue coat, and stowing it away in his unmentionables. The lady of the premises, however, had an eye upon him when he shuffled his cards, and cut them most unfortunately, by informing the owner, who trumped Martin at the first deal. Martin said in his defence that he "did not mean to deprive the man of his coat. They were playing cards together—and I didn't like to interrupt him—so I thought I might take the liberty to borrow it in that way, as I had been acquainted with him some time." 10 days imprisonment in the common jail.

House of Reformation.—We have received, through Mr Moses Grant, two statements respecting George Wesson, a boy who was arraigned, on Saturday last, on the complaint of his own mother, as a stubborn and disobedient child. The complaint was entered before one magistrate, but tried before another. At the trial, she did not disclose anything that could authorize his commitment to the house of reformation, and he was discharged. She appeared to be disconcerted by a remark of the magistrate, and stated that she should not have entered the complaint, "if Deacon Grant had not advised her to do so." A notice of the case appeared in the Post, accompanied by some reflections based upon that declaration, and the object of the above-mentioned statements, is to show in what manner Mr Grant was connected with the case. She now gives a certificate, in substance, as follows:—

"That she applied to him three different times, respecting her son; that Mr Grant fully informed her of the consequence of sending him to the house of reformation, and that she notwithstanding preferred to have him sent there; that she requested Mr G. to inform her how to proceed; that he gave her a line to the magistrate, stating that she wished to represent the case to him; that the sitting magistrate (Justice Whitman) was of opinion that the house of reformation was the proper place for the boy."

What Mrs W. stated to Judge Whitman does not appear in the certificate.

The second statement is from a respectable gentleman, who called upon her, in company with Mr G., in consequence of the report in the Post, reflecting upon him. From this statement it also appears that she was very urgent to have the boy sent to the House till he was 21, and in reply to the question, "Do you still wish to have him go there?" said, "I do, very much." She also gave such a statement of the boy's character and habits, as did not render such a destination improper; and if she had made the same statement at the trial, the result would probably have been different, and of course Mr Grant's connexion with the case fully justified; for taking her statement out of court to be true, he did precisely what his duty as a Director of the institution required him to do. The remarks, following the former notice, predicated entirely upon a want of evidence against the boy, and upon her unsolicited remark about Mr G.—without a full knowledge of the circumstances, which were never developed in court—were in consequence unjust towards him.—REF.

Miscellaneous.

Gasparini the Conicist.—This bandit is still living at Rouffehort. For some years he was much dreaded by travellers, though never guilty of cruelty. Some years ago he determined to rob a diligence, as it was passing at nightfall through a wood. He stuffed half a dozen coats, and fixed them upon poles, with formidable caps and presented arms. When the diligence arrived, he ordered the postillion to stop; he then made the conductor and passengers alight, and, in a resolute tone, pointing to his supposed companions, whom he had ranged in the skirts of the wood, desired the trunks to be opened, and took what he thought proper, saying to the affrighted traveller, "don't be alarmed; allow me to take what I require, and depend upon it my troops shall not advance a step further; from them, I assure you, you have nothing to fear." When taken, he was sentenced to the galleys for life. When the gendarmes went to scour the wood, they came up with half a dozen robbers, who appeared determined to stand their ground. They summoned them to surrender, and, receiving no reply, fired a volley, and advanced to the attack sword in hand. They then discovered that the banditti were but stuffed coats.

Riches.—What are they? Who is rich? Is it he who has fifty thousand dollars, or one million of dollars? Kings are beggars sometimes on their thrones, and merchants whose ships float on every sea; yet a poor mechanic has enough to lend. To be rich is to want nothing—to have no wishes which you cannot gratify; and the term, "getting rich," should not mean laying up money, but retrenching superfluous desires. Napoleon, with his imperial power, was more a slave than a common soldier, who received a certain stipend a day, however mean. Wealth brings wants, "hills on hills and alps on alps rise." It is incompatible with true independence. Diogenes was richer than Alexander. The one had all he desired in the warmth of the sun; the other, although master of a world, wept over the narrowness of his power. Behold the contrast!

The Duchess of Abrantes relates, that when she was about to proceed to Portugal, to join her husband, who was the Emperor's representative in that country, the Emperor gave her the following instructions:—"Live in harmony with your diplomatic sisters; but form intimacies with none of them: Little female rivalries ensue; the husbands interfere, and sometimes two states are on the point of destroying each other, because a couple of silly jades have squabbled, or the one has had a more elegant hat than the other."
